Dear Ms Cooper:

I am writing about the "reminder" about membership renewals which appears in The APRO Bulletin.

I have a problem. The renewal code appears on the address label on the envelope. The first thing I do when I receive my Bulletin is to discard the envelope. When I get around to reading the Bulletin, usually a couple of weeks later, I see this reminder. It is then too late to check the address label for the code. I am always in the dark as to when my membership expires. There must be thousands of others in a similar position.

Is there a better way of doing this? I realize this is the easiest way, because the machine prints it all out on one piece of paper, but it really doesn't help us.

Perhaps an alternative method could be considered.

Yours sincerely,

Arthur Bray.
