

Navy

-first director Roy W. Johnson from GE for his management skills.

-first deputy director (Military) Admiral John Clark from the Navy where he was the head of guided missiles.

-first business manager Lawrence Gise high level administrator for the Atomic Energy Commission.

Linda Howe stated Richard Doty had told her that the Navy and AEC were key to the cover up and were used as "dumps" for UFO documents. The IDA helped set up DARPA but their other job in this 1958 period was to give support to the WSEG which is in the office of the joint chiefs. The chairman of the joint chiefs at this time was General Nathan Twining, MJ-12 member.

From the "odd facts file" The Falcon fingers the US Naval Observatory (NAVOBSY) as the headquarters for MJ-12. From the Government Research Centers Directory NAVOBSY gives its mission as primarily "safe navigation and accurate time . . . NAVOBSY has developed the world's most accurate atomic clock." Guess who was in charge of assembling the first atomic clock in 1956? Dr. Gerald Zacharias, Jason member and inventor of the summer study session.

One more odd fact. Wilbert Smith's UFO program was called "Project Magnet". Yet, when asked about it, the Canadian Government often referred to a second project magnet. Run out of the Naval Oceanographic Office in Washington, D.C. I am checking to see if this office is in the Naval Observatory. Canadian researchers have always had a hard time obtaining any concrete evidence on this US Navy project dealing with magnetic lines of force on the earth's surface. Dr. Paul Serson, formerly director of Geomagnetism at the Dominion Observatory in Ottawa told me in a letter dated February 12, 1988, "I used to answer many questions about Project Magnet. There were so many that I kept a stack of pamphlets to send out describing Project Magnet, an unclassified program of the U.S. Navy to survey the ocean areas of the world with an airborne magnetometer. Until I read your letter, I did not know that Smith's program was also called Project Magnet."
