Dear Carol:

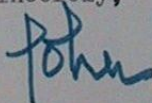

Just a note to let you know the booklet with WBS' picture arrived safely and I shall take good care of it. We are dealing with printers in Victoria now, the Duncan outfit being all but finished, and I am not sure at this point about their photo requirements but I see no reason why the Contact photo shouldn't be perfectly suitable. We'll give it a good try anyway, and many thanks for your prompt help.

As far as the Chunk itself is concerned, Brian Cannon advises he has heard from Dr. Millman that they are satisfied in Ottawa there is nothing unusual about it. In their opinion it is manganese steel, apparently being ladle residue from the Sorel Foundry. Millman said the foundry inserts a pipe in their waste molten metal for lifting purposes and the pipe leaves a hole after solidification. Evidently there is such a hole in the sample at Ottawa. This seems pretty well to dissipate the mystery and matches another report I have on hand from an interested group in Ohio that the metal has no unusual properties. However, we'll go ahead anyway, explaining all these developments, and see what happens.

Thanks for the word about Mrs. Nicolaisen. She asks for a sample copy of the magazine which I will be happy to send her, but I know the aimless involvements that sometimes develop. There is a man in Ohio who, among others down there, has been interested in the Chunk for many years and I think he finds it hard to understand why I can't write him long letters giving a minute-by-minute account of developments. But maybe these extremes are really a blessing. Without them there might be nothing in the middle.

Best for now...

Sincerely,

PS: Am preparing questionnaire with introduction for upcoming issue.
