Dear Mr. Davidson,

I have forwarded your letter of April 28th and, although I have referred to your problem, I am sorry that I did not have more time to devote to your problem. I am sorry that I did not have more time to devote to your problem.

I don't recall seeing the photograph of your father, but I am sure that it is a very good one. I am sure that it is a very good one. I am sure that it is a very good one.

In writing the above, I do not mean to infer that the piece of paper describing the panel meeting with the AFPC is incorrect. It could well be in addition to the page document I referred to.

Mr. Davidson, I am sorry that I did not have more time to devote to your problem. I am sorry that I did not have more time to devote to your problem.

- a. Specialists should be added to the staff.
- b. All necessary should be stipulated from the project.

I assume that these were the written recommendations of the panel because they were being read from a piece of paper and read aloud the panel verbally agree on them a few days before.

After I returned to AFPC, General Bernard told me he had discussed the recommendations with Major General Davidson. General Davidson had been very critical of the recommendations. General Davidson had been very critical of the recommendations.

General Bernard personally pushed the recommended investigation program but said money was the problem. General Bernard personally pushed the recommended investigation program but said money was the problem.

In my book I stated that the reason for these recommendations was that the AFPC was not sure about the 1952 reports. In my book I stated that the reason for these recommendations was that the AFPC was not sure about the 1952 reports.

You can realize the problem and why I didn't pursue the point in my book. You can realize the problem and why I didn't pursue the point in my book.

Mr. Davidson, I am sorry that I did not have more time to devote to your problem. I am sorry that I did not have more time to devote to your problem.
