

scientific laboratory for study, which would represent final and positive scientific proof.

However, there are many forms of evidence which can lead one to the firm conclusion that UFOs are indeed real, but without giving us an answer as to what they actually are or where they originate.

The type of evidence accepted in a court of law can jail a person for life, or sentence him to death, depending upon whether capital punishment happens to be fashionable at the time. This can include the testimony of witnesses, physical evidence including instrumental readings and circumstantial evidence. We all accept these types of evidence,
