

such inquiries. If [redacted] does not know the answer to a certain inquiry, she refers that letter back to ADAMSKI for reply. (b)(7)(D)

According to [redacted] ADAMSKI seeks nothing for himself, but is merely a spokesman for the people from space. (b)(7)(D)

[redacted] said that in recent weeks she and her husband had begun to wonder if ADAMSKI is subtly spreading Russian propaganda. She said that, according to ADAMSKI, the "space people" are much better people than those on earth; that they have told him the earth is in extreme danger from nuclear tests and that they must be stopped; that they have found peace under a system in which churches, schools, individual governments, money, and private property were abolished in favor of a central governing council, and nationalism and patriotism have been done away with, that the "space people" want nuclear tests stopped immediately and that never should people on earth fight; if attacked, they should lay down their arms and welcome their attackers. [redacted] said most of the above is in the above-mentioned books, including statements that only the "man in the street" in the United States knows anything, and that he is so "twisted by Wall Street" that he has no chance. (b)(7)(D)

[redacted] said the particular thing that first made her and her husband wonder about ADAMSKI was a letter they received from him dated 10/12/59, in which it was hinted that the Russians receive help in their outer space programs from the "space people," and that the "space people" will not help any nation unless such nation has peaceful intent. She said she and her husband have a ham radio network; that they read this letter over their network and a number of people on the network were angry about it. Thereafter, Mr. and Mrs. [redacted] reconsidered the two books above mentioned, containing material such as above referred to, and it occurred to them that the desires and recommendations of the "space people" whom ADAMSKI quotes are quite similar to Russia's approach, particularly as to the ending of nuclear testing, and it was for this reason she decided to call the FBI.
