Conclusions

This paper was not written as an exhaustive and conclusive study, but to present some facts, ask a few questions, stimulate discussion and suggest areas for possible future research. Any one of the topics noted herein could be the subject of an indepth study.

In closing, we would like to offer a few comments for those who fear a conspiracy by the CFR-Trilateral Commission-Bilderberger-international banker coalition to create a totalitarian one world government. What better way could this happen than by the sudden announcement, at an appropriate point in history, that "they're here" and they're not friendly? So, for those of you who subscribe to that fear, when that long-sought-after day finally arrives and the government confirms the existence of the aliens, perhaps you shouldn't believe them. Maybe UFOs are just one more element of the conspiracy; maybe they don't really exist except as propaganda, or perhaps they do exist but we won't be told the truth about them. If, by chance, the aliens have decided not to provide us with proof of their existence, then the government can tell us anything they want and get away with it.

Considering a different point of view, perhaps "they" aren't friendly but do have weaknesses that our technology can exploit. Instead of fighting each other, maybe we will be required to get together someday and cooperate as a united human race for once. Afraid of a one world government? Maybe that's the only way to survive - with or without an alien threat. Such a government does not have to be totalitarian in nature. The founders of this country discovered a way to provide for a wide variety of freedoms while building a large nation. With all our technological and social advances since World War II, the world is now smaller, relatively speaking, than our nation was when it was founded. Perhaps some of the sinister aspects of the flying saucer coverup are in our imagination and the coverup really is in our best interests at this time in history.

Hadn't considered all of that? Perhaps you should.

Now for a personal note. We admit that we have never given much credence to conspiracy theories like the ones described in the literature for the Council on Foreign Relations, the Trilateral Commission, the international bankers and others, and we still have
