Dear Mr. Dick:

I have enclosed the copy of your article about me, as you requested on the telephone today. I have written in a few suggested changes and additions purely for the sake of complete accuracy. If you can incorporate these, I will be grateful. In fact, I would not like them to be omitted.

You will note my question mark concerning the words "self-taught physicist" on page one, line one. In this case I really would prefer that you delete that, as I am not a physicist by any stretch of the imagination. What little I have learned was self-taught admittedly but calling me a physicist is stretching it.

I will send off a better photo to you very shortly.

I do appreciate very much your sending this article to me for approval. This is responsible journalism of the highest order. It is a pity that more newspapers do not practice this.

My best personal regards to you.

Very sincerely,

Arthur Bray
