Hi Grant,

Thanks for the e-mail. I will take a look tomorrow and see if I find anything and let you know. (I can't do this tonight because the lines are all busy). But just in case I can't let me tell you how the thing works.

If you using netscape, or internet explorer. Instead of http:// type

<telnet://sklib.usask.ca>

and the system will ask you for a username, at which you type:

diefarch

for Diefenbaker Archives. And you'll get an introductory screen.

At this point your in the catalogue, but to use it is a bit odd.

You have to type: F and then searh word for example: F Wilbert

and return

F is for find and it will tell you the number of hits.

then you have to type L to look at the number of hits.

Anyways, I will do a search for you; and let you know if I find anything.

Oh, I will also tell you where they are on the web.

<http://www.usask.ca/diefenbaker.index>

I think that is the address. The person who runs the archives only works 1/2 time.

Until tommorrow.

Rick
