My dear Frank:

Just a line to thank you for coping with the unexpected invasion of the Leslie Touring Flea Circus last week.

When our camel caravan did come forth, hot and flustered from the desert, thou gavest us wine to drink and food for our bellies, and water (& Woodbury's) wherewith to cleanse our feet -- for which Allah will bless you.

Thou didst also charm us with an assortment of maidens of all sizes, bearing in their foreheads the mystic sign "Scully, junior".

Today at the coming up of the sun our camels are being gotten onto their lazy feet, dusted, combed, and yea, even de-flea-ed -- that our caravan may once more set forth upon the trail where do many sheiks of fat belly and greasy girth (may Allah deflate their tires!) ride thereon in Cadillacs, whose exhaust tube stinketh and maketh much clamour on the pure desert air.

Wending our way therefore, by numerous water-holes, such as Oceansi-de-barani and El-la-gun-na, we hope to come even unto the gates of the Metrollopsis of Fallen Angels at the going down of the sun; and thence across Sahara-America to Babylon-New-York.

May Allah smile fulsomely on all thy works! And may jackals spit sideways upon the dishonored tombs of all thine enemies and their ill-conceived grandmothers!

Benedictions!

Desmond Leslie

My Dear Frank,

How are you all? Here, we're simply plain cold!

I was disturbed to see in your letter to 'nexus' (a most chaotic periodical) that you number me among your detractors. Why?

Why, Frank? What have I ever done or said against you? I can only assume the gossips, tale-bearers and fourth-hand misquoters have been inventing something that I am meant to have said concerning you.

Believe me, I cannot recall ever having said anything to hurt you, nor would I do so.

When I first read your book some years ago I was a little skeptical; it seemed to good to be true. However, when the Stephen Darbishire photos were taken I realised that one of the saucers you described exactly fitted that pattern. Since then I have always said that your description of the small saucer and the Adamski and Darbishire pictures stand or fall together. I have said that publically and often. I have also added that I believe them all to be true.

After meeting you this summer I realised that you are a completely sincere and courageous fellow and I admire you for being the first man in the world to have told the truth. That is my belief and I shall continue to state it.

I'd be very glad if you'd tell me what sources have led you to believe that I've been talking against you, so that I can shut them up. There are too many little people cashing in on this great subject; and when they have nothing original to contribute, they try for fame by detracting from those who have. Wleas always try to eat lions!

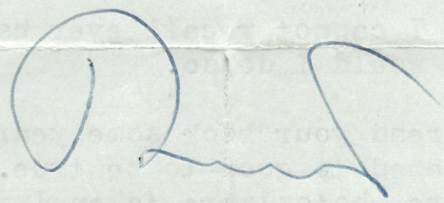

Let it be known, Frank, that I admire you, like you, and believe in you. No little twister of truth is going to alter that in any way.

I am sending a statement to Nexus to this effect.

I do hope this will clear up whatever false impression has been given you.

Best wishes as always

Sincerely

Desmond Leslie
