Disappeared as it turned in a southerly direction, seeming to climb at extremely fast speed.				11. COMMENTS A call was made to Cape Canaveral and it was determined that a Titan missile was launched at 0005Z. Its trajectory was aprox the same as that reported for the object.

27 June 1960

First Message - ATC, New York reports following:

Eastern Airlines 860 DC-6, San Juan, Puerto Rico to Idlewild at 0012Z, position 2600N 6800W, sighted what appeared to be two rockets; one with a halo moving west to east, second object started moving west. The two rockets seemed to be burning up with long red streaks to the horizon.

Second message -

MERINT from SO Manchester - "At 0015 GMT, latitude 18N, longitude 5410W, unidentified object, very high and traveling at great speed, course approximately 120°".

Third message -

MERINT from FPZT JUNON - "at 0012Z, position 22.6N 69.1W, unidentified flying object, high speed, high altitude, course west to east, decreasing magnitude about two BT".

Fourth message -

MERINT "Poly Clipper FLASH LEAT, position 2923N 6535W from Curacao bound Montreal - Weather SW, clear. At 0015 GMT sighted bright body approximately 260° with course approximately 110°, disappeared approximately at 0025".

Last message -

MERINT "Following received SS Soya, Pacific - "Satellite path overhead M-S, latitude N2605 longitude W6928, coming from 275° at 0017 GMT, June 25, gaining in height".

On the morning of 27 June 1960, Lt Col Rosen called Cape Canaveral, Florida and talked to Col Thompson. The following info was furnished by Col Thompson:

at 0005 Z, Test no. 1802 ^(TITAN) was launched to impact at station 12 (Ascension island).
The flight lasted approx 30 minutes.
