Speed, size, altitude and flight characteristics conform to known flight patterns. Sound when passing overhead indicates a/c. (conventional) as does lighting effects through telescope. Possible explanation of bright light is a/c running with landing light/lights on. This may not explain trailing position of light as a/c approaches, but there is the possibility that light may have appeared to trail while actually it was facing downward.

Dear Sir:

I am writing to report the sighting of a UFO by myself and a friend of mine, [REDACTED]. The following report is as accurate as our short observation of the object will permit.

On the evening of August 3, 1961 we were sitting in the back yard, in Kentland, Indiana, with a small telescope. We had been watching Jupiter and Saturn. We were leaning back in our chairs looking for meteors and awaiting the 12:07 passage of Echo I satellite. The object in question caught our attention about 45 degrees above the horizon. It was moving in an East-North-east direction and appeared to be moving at about the speed of a plane. We both immediately thought that it was a comet; it had a bright nucleus and a wide fan of light behind it, as a comet. I immediately tried to get it in focus with the telescope (BOX), and I succeeded just before it reached the zenith. It was then that I realized that it was not a comet. It appeared to have a system of lights on it and then sound from it was heard. I lost it with the telescope and my companion continued to watch it. He says that it became very bright as it passed overhead. When it had passed the zenith, perhaps the strangest thing of all occurred; the direction of the tail or fan changed. It had been in the opposite direction of the object's movement; now it was directly in front of the object, as the headlights of a car. When the object had disappeared, I checked my watch: 11:34 PM CDT.

I have spent many hours observing the stars and planets with my telescope, and since Kentland is on an airline out of Chicago, I have observed many airplanes at night; I know what they look like. It is because this object was so much out of the ordinary that I feel compelled to report it.

I would be very interested in and would appreciate very much any information you might find concerning this object.

Sincerely, [REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

Kentland, Indiana

This is a small sketch of the object sighted.

It looked very much like a comet with an unusually wide tail.
